Sandy Hill Is Named Most Valuable Football Player

Hill To Attend Buck-Wolves Tilt

Sandy Hili, junior kingpin of Circleville's championship football team, will see the Ohio State-Michigar game Saturday as the guest of Columbus Mayor James A. Rhodes.

The capital city chief executive, guest speaker at the Booster Club honor banquet Friday night, personally invited Hill to share the mayor's 50-yard line box at the game.

Voted the most valuable player of the 198 Circleville team, Hill was to appear at Rhoades' City Hall office at 11 a. m., and then ride to the game in the official's auto behind screaming sirens of a police escort.

Thunderous acclamation accompanied the announcement Friday night that Harold "Sandy" Hill had been named the "most valuable player" of the chamionship 1948 Circleville high school football team.

The staid, sedate walls of Circleville First Methodist church virtually rattled when the announcement was made.

It came as the climax of a near four-hour-long Booster Club banquet dished out in honor of Circleville's undefeated championship football team. About 300 persons attended.

Not a single voice of objection was heard when Hill's name was read. All agreed it could not have happened to a nicer guy—or to one more deserving.

Playing his third year of varsity ball in his junior year, the eel-hipped Hill sparked the Tiger team to an undefeated and untied season this year, personally racking up 112 points and assisting for another 42.

"Hill, Hill, Hill" was the name on the tip of hundreds of tongues during the season as the one man powerhouse ran, passed, punted and coverted extra points like mad.

The stocky left halfback personally toted the leather into enemy paydirt 16 times during Circleville's first perfect season in 28 years. He passed for an additional seven tallies and booted 16 conversions.

The whole Tiger offense this year revolved around the scintillating back, who ripped and slashed through near impenetrable enemy forward walls and laid passes in receiver's hands surrounded by the opposition.

When the Tigers were forced into dangerous spots by opposition, Hill was called on to apply his magic toe, booting long spiraling punts which set the enemy back into its own territory.

And behind the uprights following a scoring spree Hill booted conversions with deadly accuracy, missing only three conversion attempts during the season.

But, in addition to his stellar gridiron record, Hill was chosen as the top Tiger grid man for his strict training schedule, his moral attitude on the field and off, service to the team and his leadership ability.

Dr. Walter Heine, past president of the Booster Club who made the presentation, had difficulty concealing the identity of the player as he read from the sealed ballot.

Fans attending the banquet were of one thought: "It better be Hill".

Hill is the third Circleville ballplayer to receive the award, first trophy taken by Jim Carter in 1946 and Dave Crawford, student assistant to the coaches this season, was the winner in 1947.

Highlight of the program was the address by Mayor James A. Rhodes of Columbus, president of the Amateur Athletic Union and an aide to this year's Olympics games in London.

Rhodes spoke on "Freedom of Athletics" as advocated in American schools and colleges.

The capital city mayor compared English sports setups in the various schools he had visited while attending the Olympics, stating that from what he had seen, and what he had heard about programs in the other nations of the world, he considered the "American system the world's finest".

Another speaker in the evening's entertainment was Bill Smith, Olympics swimming champion attending Ohio State university.

Smith, who copped the 400 meter swimming title in the world event last Summer in a record-breaking time and who was anchor man on a relay team, told of his experiences in the games and of the competitive spirit shown there.

He told also of having received one of the greatest thrills of his life Friday afternoon when he met Chic Harley, former grid great of Ohio State. "A wonderful experience", the swimmer said.

Boyd Stout performed master- the Waltonian Quartet of Logan. quet, announcing as first speaker Booster Club President John Heiskell.

Heiskell presented honorary memberships to the Booster Club to all senior members of the football team, and to Sally Mogan, senior cheerleader.

Other speakers on the program were Head Coach Steve Brudzinski, Line Coach Tom Bennett, Mayor Thurman I. Miller and Dorwin Peer, basketball

Blizzard Quieting

Plains States Are Hit Hard

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—A raging blizzard sweeping over the nation's cornbelt states began to abate today.

The season's first major snowfall in the Plains States delayed many of the major railroads' crack trains from two to 17 hours.

Troops of the Kansas state militia were ordered out to aid hundreds of motorists stranded along the highways.

Western Kansas was hardest hit by the unexpected blizzard. The fall ranged up to a depth of ten inches.

Garden City was isolated as 75 miles-an-hour winds piled the snow into drifts which blocked highways.

At least two deaths were attributed to the storm. Louis C. Hanon, 65, of Willmar, Minn., and Lloyd W. Lenard, 29, of Redwood Falls,Minn., were killed when their cars crashed head-on in Minnesota, where the snow was

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Negotiations to end the paralyzing east dock strike resume today with increased prospects for a settlement of the 11-day-old walkout.

Settlement hopes rose after the strikers, all members of the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) cut in half their demand for a 50-cents-an-hour wage increase.

Strike Ends In Dunkirk

Troops Move Into Port; Reds Vanish

PARIS, Nov. 20 — French troops demolished barricades and took over the strike-bound docks of the port of Dunkirk today without opposition.

Picketing longshoremen, who quit work Tuesday, six days before the time set for a general dock strike called by the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (CGT), were found to have left the barricades during the night.

The pickets apparently fled after watching some 4,000 North African troops, equipped with half-tracks, maneuver into position to seize the docks.

Early this morning the troops moved in. They destroyed the dock gates, wall, and barricades built by the Germans during occupation days to defend the city from Allied attack, and then fanned out to seize the entire harbor.

The city remained tense. At the Place Duminck, a company of Spahis and security guards in half-tracks faced a hundred workers and fishermen who defied an order against assembling on the streets.

But the quick occupation of the harbor area, where trouble had been expected, gave hope that there would be no outbreaks. The longshoremen had remained in position behind the dock barricades for four days.

China Rests After Claim Of Victory

Suchow Area Said Cleaned Of Reds

NANKING, Nov. 20—China's Nationalist capital relaxed today in the wake of smashing government victories in the battle for Suchow.

An official government communique said more than 2,000 Communists had been killed while trying to escape government forces near the Grand Canal east and north of Suchow.

It was in this area, bounded by the canal and the Lunghai and Tientsin-Pukow railroads, that the Reds had concentrated their greatest forces for the attack that might have opened up all of Central China to them.

The government said these latest casualties were inflicted by Nationalist air force.. planes which bombed and strafed the shattered remnants of once hard-hitting Red forces as they attempted to cross the canal.

The Communist radio—usually boundlessly optimistic— was vague in broadcasts heard in Nanking.

Neutral observers in Nanking admitted the government had one of its greatest victories in China's tragic civil war.

It also is expected to be submitted for final examination to British Defense Minister A. V. Alexander and the top British defense chiefs.

Spectacular Fire Hits In Indiana

Charles Loveless Given Treatment

Charles R. Loveless of Circleville was one of 12 persons injured early Saturday when blasts split the Big Inch and Little Inch gas lines in South Central Indiana.

Extent of Loveless' injuries could not immediately be ascertained Saturday. International News Service reported from Seymour, Ind., near where the explosions occurred, that the Circleville man had received treatment in a hospital.

Loveless, former partner with L. E. Williams in the Scioto Electric Co. here, has been employed as an electrician superintendent on the famous pipelines.

At noon, flames from two blasts which split the lines still blazed.

Officials shut off the lines at stations in Medora and Batesville, Ind., and at Somerset, O., after the explosions.

Technicians were scheduled to arrive at Reddington, Ind., to reroute the line.

No estimate was immediately available on the length of time supplies would be cut off.

Three of those hurt—none seriously—were hospitalized in Schneck Memorial hospital in Seymour. They were Jack B. Walters, 30, Middletown, O.; Charles Beineke, 39, Seymour; and Marvin Dixon, 43, West Baden, Ind. The other nine were

Navy Unveils Tailless Jet Fighter Claimed To Be Fastest In World

PATUXENT, Md., Nov. 20 — Navy pilots confidently predicted today that their radically-new tailless twin jet fighter will prove to be the world's fastest pursuit airplane.

The Navy unveiled the plane—the Chance-Vought XS7U, or "Cutlass"—at the Patuxent Naval Air Test Center, with the famed test pilot, Capt. F. M. Trapnell, at the controls.

The Cutlass does not look like any other fighter aircraft yet seen in the United States. It has a short stubby, very wide and radically swept back wing.

It has no conventional tail, and the fuselage extends from the rear of the tail only as far as is necessary for the thrust exhausts of the twin Westinghouse turbo-jet engines.

Two vertical stabilizers and rudders are located at the trailing edge of the wing, and an ingenious differential mechanism allows the ailerons to double in brass as elevators.

Trapnell, flying the plane for the benefit of newsmen, obviously was keeping it under wraps. But Navy pilots at Patuxent declared it would prove to be faster than any other fighter aircraft either land or carrier-based.

The XS7U is designed as a carrier aircraft but has not yet been tried on carriers.

To be faster than other aircraft, the Cutlass will have to exceed the record of 670.981 miles per hour set recently by the Air Force's North American F-86.

The plane obtains unusual visibility in flight by having the cockpit almost at the tip of the nose, which is in a short fuselage extending forward from the wing.

The Navy maintains that through the use of two turbo-jet engines in a comparatively light airplane a high rate of climb has been obtained.

Navy pilots said they had seen the plane fly at almost incredible angles, but Trapnell put the plane into no unusual climbs while newsmen were present.

The XS7U is one of the first airplanes designed for turbo-jet engines with after-burners, which utilize the intense heat of jet combustion for short bursts of exceptional thrusts.

The Cutlass has no ordinary landing flaps, obtaining the extra lift necessary for slow carrier landings through use of slats

The blasts, which came about two hours apart, leveled the pumping station near Reddington and were heard several miles away.

Indiana state police reported that the explosions rocked houses 20 miles from the station. They said the flames which leaped 500 feet into the air could be seen at Madison, 40 miles from the scene on the Ohio river.

The blaze threatened several farm buildings and timber in the area before it was brought under control after six hours.

Heat from the flames was so intense that firemen from Columbus, Flat Rock and Seymour were unable to approach the station before they died down.

CANTON, Nov. 20 — Manslaughter and trespassing charges reportedly will be filed Monday against a 16-year-old youth who fatally wounded three-year-old Daniel Fritsch Wednesday.

The Fritsch child died early yesterday of the wounds received when he was struck by a blast from the youthful hunter's shotgun on the boy's parents' farm three miles north of nearby Malvern.

Funeral services will be conducted Monday for the lad. His father, John Fritsch, is expected to file the charges following the funeral.

The Nationalists admitted that their own forces had suffered 40,000 casualties.

(Editor's Note—) Both Nationalist and Communist casualty claims are often greatly exaggerated.)

Observers were skeptical of government claims as to the extent of the Red defeat. It was believed the Communists were retreating so as to reorganize for new assaults on the Suchow rail center—key to the defense of the rich Yangtze Valley.

Government forces were using loudspeaker equipment to persuade the beaten and scattered Red units to surrender their arms.

Pupils Reluctant To Settlement In School Tiff

AKRON, Nov. 20 — Compromised, but not settled, is the neighboring Twinsburg school dispute today.

Striking high school students agreed yesterday to end a three-day strike, but indicated they would continue to fight for the removal of School Superintendent Glen L. Powell.

Agreement to end the boycott Monday came at a meeting between school board officials and leaders of the striking students.

The students reportedly were pacified with promises that the school will resume publication of a newspaper and that greater emphasis will be placed henceforth on extra-curricular activities.

Only 26 of the high school's 160 students reported to classes during the strike.

Parents of pupils involved in the dispute are slated to present petitions to a school board meeting Monday night demand the removal of Powell.

ECA Chief Asks End To Strike

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman warned both sides today that the longshoremen's strike may imperil the Marshall Plan.

Hoffman, in telegrams to John V. Lyon, of the New York shipping Association and Joseph P. Ryan of the longshoremen's union, said:

"The continued flow of recovery goods to the participating countries is vital to the success of the entire recovery program.

"I ask, therefore, that early in your resumed negotiations you jointly undertake to agree on some plan which will permit the prompt renewal of all ECA traffic now being halted by the stoppage of work."

Cairo Hears Of New Queen

CAIRO, Nov. 20 — There is speculation in Cairo today that divorced and sonless King Farouk may wed the young and beautiful widow of a distant cousin in his determination to provide a male heir to the throne of Egypt.

The widow, wealthy Egyptian Priness Fatma Tousson, renowned for her beauty, her smart clothes, and her fabulous jewels, has been seen much in the king's company.

The 28-year-old monarch announced yesterday his own divorce from Queen Farida, and that of his sister, the Empress Fawzia, from the Shah of Iran.

cents for overtime, night and holiday work.

A spokesman for the employers said that "sometimes a negotiating committee has to have its authority extended."

This was interpreted to indicate possibility of a compromise on the part of the owners.

The union also is asking increased overtime and retroactive pay and one "shape-up" daily instead of the traditional two.

The "shape-up" is the customary means of assigning longshoremen to jobs. The men assemble at a designated place in the dock area, and then are apportioned the available work by union officials.

Solon Urging Global RFC

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—Sen. Capehart, (R) Ind., today proposed that American foreign aid be employed as a means of fighting "state socialism" as well as Communism.

The Indiana senator said that he would press the 81st Congress for adoption of a private enterprise substitute for the Marshall Plan. His plan calls for establishment of an international division of the Reconsturction Finance Corp. to handle both European and Asiatic aid.

His plan would allow the RFC to use appropriated funds to invest in the stock of similar corporations set up in aided countries. The RFC would purchase approximately 50 percent of the stock, and the foreign governments would buy the rest.

East-West Tiff Said Like Tweedledum, Tweedledee

PARIS, Nov. 20—Time is running out on the West's effort to get a solution of the Berlin problem at the current session of the United Nations

The recent exchange of letters between top UN officials and the Big Four on the next move to seek a settlement has left the problem in midair—just where it was nearly a month ago.

The West refuses to budge from its refusal to negotiate while the blockade is in force.

The Big Four as well as the Germans are wondering what happens next.

One possibility is that the whole matter may be dumped into the lap of the General Assembly, provided enough support for such a move can be mustered among the smaller powers.

The assembly, however, is driving for adjournment next month.

Assembly President Herbert Evatt refuses to give up his joint attempt with UN Secretary General Trygve Lie to get the Big Four thinking again about the next move for a Berlin settlement.

LIE IS WORKING on a separate plan involving a currency agreement for Berlin that would open the way for still another approach to the Big Four.

Juan Bramuglia of Argentina, also has not abandoned his efforts to mediate the problem.

All present signs indicate that Russia and the West will have to go back to the small-power resolution which the Russians vetoed Oct. 25 to see if a reshuffle of words can provide the magic key to agreement.

One high UN official described the East-West dispute as the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee.

Boiled down, this is the way ideas about ending the blockade and installing Soviet currency in all of Berlin:

The West wants the entire Berlin blockade lifted immediately and the opening of talks on currency details. The West is willing to set a deadline for agreement on currency.

The West also is agreeable to a foreign ministers' conference on the whole German problem after agreement is reached on the Berlin currency.

The Russians have indicated willingness to lift the blockade in stages, first with the removal of the highway and water blockade of Berlin, and then by lifting the more important rail restrictions at the same same that a new Soviet currency begins to operate in Berlin.

THE WEST is wary of the Soviet plan because of Russia's ability to reimpose the blockade in full force should the currency talks fail again. After the Aug. 30 agreement reached in Moscow talks on currency broke down in Berlin itself.

Russia's suggestion for a conference of the Big Four chiefs of state on Berlin and other problems seemingly is doomed also.

The Germans are probably the most pessimistic of all about a settlement.

coach.

Brudzinski introduced the team to the fans, following up with introductions of cheerleaders, team managers and Crawford.

Peer was put on the spot in his turn at the speaker's platform, prime question asked: "Can you follow up this year's championship grid team with a championship court team"?

Peer shed his usual tear, wished he had some "tall" men.

Introductions were made also to Truman "Costello" Eberly, Circleville high school band director, Mrs. Steve Brudzinski and Mrs. Tom Bennett.

Most entertaining of the evening's planned program was the initial performance put on by the Waltonian uartet of Logan.

Dressed as footballers, vintage '29, the four men trouped onto the stage to render football novelty songs. Each of the four men wore handlebar mustaches, headgear on backwards and sideways and shoulder pads flopping noisily.

The quartet returned later to sing several legitimate selections, all of which were enthusiastically received by the listeners.

Decorations for the affair, if not elaborate, were appropriate, with red and black stripes extending the length of the tables, red candles, printed napkins and souvenir banquet booklets.

Three signs standing above three tables at the event caught the eye of the crowd, the first placed over the table reserved for parents of the team, proclaiming "We are the parents"; the second placed on another table stating "We are the fans"; and the third placed on the team's table—"We are the champs".

Tiger football helmets were placed above the stage, lettered in Red and Black proclaiming the results of the eight Circleville victories this season.

Democrats Plan No Purge For Party Bolters

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — Democartic Chairman J. Howard McGrath gave his party's 1948 election "bolters" today the hint of an approach for reuniting Democarts in Congress.

The party leader and senator from Rhode Island said the constituents of Sen. Taylor, (D) Ida., candidate, should not be "penalized" because Taylor broke with the Democartic organization. He told a news conference the "same reasoning" can be applied to the States' Rights group.

One Southern Democrat, who declined to be named, said Democratic leaders would be "wise" to handle the problem that way.

At the same time the party chairman said that the question of whether Dixiecrats would be "purged" from the national committee would have to be settled "in the states." McGrath explained that the national organization has no authority to remove a national committee member.

Some observers on Capitol Hill believed the McGrath reference to protecting constituents of previously-loyal Democratic members of congress provided a timely "principle" for restoring harmony.

Big Industry May Get Call To Freight Hearing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — Sen. Capehart, (R) Ind., said today he may subpoena big industrial officials before the small business committee to tell whether the freight base cement decision will hurt or help them.

At the same time, Capehart declared that a Federal Trade Commission spokesman "let the cat out of the bag" with disclosure that a big company able to establish branch warehouses or operate fleets of trucks still may continue to absorb freight costs and reduce prices to meet competition.

The Indiana senator asserted that the U. S. Supreme Court decision requiring cement and steel customers to pay the freight - making cost greater for distant buyers—injures small business instead of the industrial giants at which FTC had aimed.

Capehart pointed out that no cement companies and "only the little fellows in steel" have sent spokesmen to his hearings to urge legislation enabling them to resume absorption of freight through prices depending on certain geographical basing points used by major companies.

AFL Planning Super Lobby

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20—The American Federation of Labor is planning a super lobby to function during the 81st session of Congress.

AFL President William Green said the 15-member AFL executive council would recommend the establishment of a huge "legislative council" to today's session of the AFL's 105 international unions would be invited to send a representative to sit on the legislative council. Purpose of the group would be to show labor strength and to prevent duplication of lobbying effort.

Herbert Delays Assembly Call

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20—A decision on whether there will be a special session of the Republican-controlled lame-duck legislature was put over today until next week.

Gov. Thomas J. Herbert declared after a session with legislative leaders yesterday that "opinion is divided" on the special session proposal.

The outgoing Republican governor has indicated he favors calling the session to appropriate an additional $1 million for a new tuberculosis hospital at Ohio State university medical center.

TWO OF THE Rock Island Railroad's streamlined "Rockets" were lost temporarily. One of them, en route from Chicago to Denver, became stalled in drifts and was unable to report its position because of disrupted communications.

Three planes and a helicopter took off from an Army air field near Denver to locate one of the missing trains. However, train crews finally reported their position.

Drifts as high as ten feet which piled up during the last two days marooned traffic and disrupted communications in many localities.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., said the blizzard was "the worst in recent years." The company said it cut service on 643 long-distance circuits. Portable radio sets were given repair crews to maintain contact while the lines were being fixed.

AFL Spokesman Says Wisconsin Solon Faces Rap

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20 — A representative of the AFL's Labor League for Political Education said today he "understood some Wisconsin lawyers" are going to file payroll- padding charges against Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski, (R) Wis.

Thomas Duncan o fthe LLPS's Washington office said it was his understanding the charges would be similar to those filed against J. Parnell Thomas, New Jersey Republican and chairman of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee.

Duncan denied, however, that the charges would be filed directly by the LLPE.

He said the league's only action in the matter was to circulate in a news release information "dug up" by the Madison (Wis.) Capitol Times and later by the Wisconsin department of taxation.

The release circulated by the LLPE said The Times charged O'Konski had on his payroll one Martin Vickers and two other employes of a weekly newspaper which O'Konski purchased from Vickers.

Duncan even denied knowing the lawyers who would file the charges. Grinning broadly, he declared they would "just represent good citizens."

released after treatment.

The blasts, which came about two hours apart, leveled the pumping station near Reddington and were heard several miles away.

Indiana state police reported that the explosions rocked houses 20 miles from the station. They said the flames which leaped 500 feet into the air could be seen at Madison, 40 miles from the scene on the Ohio river.

The blaze threatened several farm buildings and timber in the area before it was brought under control after six hours.

Heat from the flames was so intense that firemen from Columbus, Flat Rock and Seymour were unable to approach the station before they died down.

The pipelines carry natural gas from Texas to Indiana and Ohio points. They were built during the war to transmit gas to the eastern seaboard.

The big inch enters Southern Indiana slightly north of Evansville and leaves the state south of Richmond. It was sold in 1947 to the Texas Eastern Transmission Corp.

The little inch exploded at Petersburg, Ind., last March 19 and caused heavy damage. No one was killed.

Check-Bouncer Sought Here

The Pickaway County sheriff's office has sent a telegraph warrant to Bluefield, W. Va., authorities to apprehend a W. D. Hairston, wanted here for passing a $65 bogus check at Court-Main restaurant.

Deputy Sheriff Vern L. Pontius said the check was made payable to a Rev. W. D. Hairston on Third National Bank of Circleville and bore the forged signature of H. L. Thomas.

County officials said Hairston was not a minister. His record shows that he passed a forged check in Circleville several years ago, Deputy Pontius declared.

Tarheels Try Indictment Again

LORAIN, Nov. 20—Ira Newton Coston, 45, was back in Lorain city jail today, prepared to battle once more to escape extradition to North Carolina to face a charged of attempted rape.

He was arrested by Lorain detectives yesterday after receipt of an indictment returned against him in Henderson County, North Carolina, for an alleged armed criminal assault on a 17-year-old girl.

Coston was arrested in August and held for North Carolina officials, but won his freedom at that time on the grounds that he was illegally detained.

cents for overtime, night and holiday work.

A spokesman for the employers said that "sometimes a negotiating committee has to have its authority extended."

This was interpreted to indicate possibility of a compromise on the part of the owners.

The union also is asking increased overtime and retroactive pay and one "shape-up" daily instead of the traditional two.

The "shape-up" is the customary means of assigning longshoremen to jobs. The men assemble at a designated place in the dock area, and then are apportioned the available work by union officials.

Solon Urging Global RFC

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—Sen. Capehart, (R) Ind., today proposed that American foreign aid be employed as a means of fighting "state socialism" as well as Communism.

The Indiana senator said that he would press the 81st Congress for adoption of a private enterprise substitute for the Marshall Plan. His plan calls for establishment of an international division of the Reconsturction Finance Corp. to handle both European and Asiatic aid.

His plan would allow the RFC to use appropriated funds to invest in the stock of similar corporations set up in aided countries. The RFC would purchase approximately 50 percent of the stock, and the foreign governments would buy the rest.

East-West Tiff Said Like Tweedledum, Tweedledee

PARIS, Nov. 20—Time is running out on the West's effort to get a solution of the Berlin problem at the current session of the United Nations

The recent exchange of letters between top UN officials and the Big Four on the next move to seek a settlement has left the problem in midair—just where it was nearly a month ago.

The West refuses to budge from its refusal to negotiate while the blockade is in force.

The Big Four as well as the Germans are wondering what happens next.

One possibility is that the whole matter may be dumped into the lap of the General Assembly, provided enough support for such a move can be mustered among the smaller powers.

The assembly, however, is driving for adjournment next month.

Assembly President Herbert Evatt refuses to give up his joint attempt with UN Secretary General Trygve Lie to get the Big Four thinking again about the next move for a Berlin settlement.

LIE IS WORKING on a separate plan involving a currency agreement for Berlin that would open the way for still another approach to the Big Four.

Juan Bramuglia of Argentina, also has not abandoned his efforts to mediate the problem.

All present signs indicate that Russia and the West will have to go back to the small-power resolution which the Russians vetoed Oct. 25 to see if a reshuffle of words can provide the magic key to agreement.

One high UN official described the East-West dispute as the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee.

Boiled down, this is the way ideas about ending the blockade and installing Soviet currency in all of Berlin:

The West wants the entire Berlin blockade lifted immediately and the opening of talks on currency details. The West is willing to set a deadline for agreement on currency.

The West also is agreeable to a foreign ministers' conference on the whole German problem after agreement is reached on the Berlin currency.

The Russians have indicated willingness to lift the blockade in stages, first with the removal of the highway and water blockade of Berlin, and then by lifting the more important rail restrictions at the same same that a new Soviet currency begins to operate in Berlin.

THE WEST is wary of the Soviet plan because of Russia's ability to reimpose the blockade in full force should the currency talks fail again. After the Aug. 30 agreement reached in Moscow talks on currency broke down in Berlin itself.

Russia's suggestion for a conference of the Big Four chiefs of state on Berlin and other problems seemingly is doomed also.

The Germans are probably the most pessimistic of all about a settlement.

coach.

Brudzinski introduced the team to the fans, following up with introductions of cheerleaders, team managers and Crawford.

Peer was put on the spot in his turn at the speaker's platform, prime question asked: "Can you follow up this year's championship grid team with a championship court team"?

Peer shed his usual tear, wished he had some "tall" men.

Introductions were made also to Truman "Costello" Eberly, Circleville high school band director, Mrs. Steve Brudzinski and Mrs. Tom Bennett.

Most entertaining of the evening's planned program was the initial performance put on by the Waltonian uartet of Logan.

Dressed as footballers, vintage '29, the four men trouped onto the stage to render football novelty songs. Each of the four men wore handlebar mustaches, headgear on backwards and sideways and shoulder pads flopping noisily.

The quartet returned later to sing several legitimate selections, all of which were enthusiastically received by the listeners.

Decorations for the affair, if not elaborate, were appropriate, with red and black stripes extending the length of the tables, red candles, printed napkins and souvenir banquet booklets.

Three signs standing above three tables at the event caught the eye of the crowd, the first placed over the table reserved for parents of the team, proclaiming "We are the parents"; the second placed on another table stating "We are the fans"; and the third placed on the team's table—"We are the champs".

Tiger football helmets were placed above the stage, lettered in Red and Black proclaiming the results of the eight Circleville victories this season.

Democrats Plan No Purge For Party Bolters

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — Democartic Chairman J. Howard McGrath gave his party's 1948 election "bolters" today the hint of an approach for reuniting Democarts in Congress.

The party leader and senator from Rhode Island said the constituents of Sen. Taylor, (D) Ida., candidate, should not be "penalized" because Taylor broke with the Democartic organization. He told a news conference the "same reasoning" can be applied to the States' Rights group.

One Southern Democrat, who declined to be named, said Democratic leaders would be "wise" to handle the problem that way.

At the same time the party chairman said that the question of whether Dixiecrats would be "purged" from the national committee would have to be settled "in the states." McGrath explained that the national organization has no authority to remove a national committee member.

Some observers on Capitol Hill believed the McGrath reference to protecting constituents of previously-loyal Democratic members of congress provided a timely "principle" for restoring harmony.

Big Industry May Get Call To Freight Hearing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — Sen. Capehart, (R) Ind., said today he may subpoena big industrial officials before the small business committee to tell whether the freight base cement decision will hurt or help them.

At the same time, Capehart declared that a Federal Trade Commission spokesman "let the cat out of the bag" with disclosure that a big company able to establish branch warehouses or operate fleets of trucks still may continue to absorb freight costs and reduce prices to meet competition.

The Indiana senator asserted that the U. S. Supreme Court decision requiring cement and steel customers to pay the freight - making cost greater for distant buyers—injures small business instead of the industrial giants at which FTC had aimed.

Capehart pointed out that no cement companies and "only the little fellows in steel" have sent spokesmen to his hearings to urge legislation enabling them to resume absorption of freight through prices depending on certain geographical basing points used by major companies.

AFL Planning Super Lobby

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20—The American Federation of Labor is planning a super lobby to function during the 81st session of Congress.

AFL President William Green said the 15-member AFL executive council would recommend the establishment of a huge "legislative council" to today's session of the AFL's 105 international unions would be invited to send a representative to sit on the legislative council. Purpose of the group would be to show labor strength and to prevent duplication of lobbying effort.

Herbert Delays Assembly Call

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20—A decision on whether there will be a special session of the Republican-controlled lame-duck legislature was put over today until next week.

Gov. Thomas J. Herbert declared after a session with legislative leaders yesterday that "opinion is divided" on the special session proposal.

The outgoing Republican governor has indicated he favors calling the session to appropriate an additional $1 million for a new tuberculosis hospital at Ohio State university medical center.

reported to be eight inches deep in sections.

TWO OF THE Rock Island Railroad's streamlined "Rockets" were lost temporarily. One of them, en route from Chicago to Denver, became stalled in drifts and was unable to report its position because of disrupted communications.

Three planes and a helicopter took off from an Army air field near Denver to locate one of the missing trains. However, train crews finally reported their position.

Drifts as high as ten feet which piled up during the last two days marooned traffic and disrupted communications in many localities.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., said the blizzard was "the worst in recent years." The company said it cut service on 643 long-distance circuits. Portable radio sets were given repair crews to maintain contact while the lines were being fixed.

AFL Spokesman Says Wisconsin Solon Faces Rap

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20 — A representative of the AFL's Labor League for Political Education said today he "understood some Wisconsin lawyers" are going to file payroll- padding charges against Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski, (R) Wis.

Thomas Duncan o fthe LLPS's Washington office said it was his understanding the charges would be similar to those filed against J. Parnell Thomas, New Jersey Republican and chairman of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee.

Duncan denied, however, that the charges would be filed directly by the LLPE.

He said the league's only action in the matter was to circulate in a news release information "dug up" by the Madison (Wis.) Capitol Times and later by the Wisconsin department of taxation.

The release circulated by the LLPE said The Times charged O'Konski had on his payroll one Martin Vickers and two other employes of a weekly newspaper which O'Konski purchased from Vickers.

Duncan even denied knowing the lawyers who would file the charges. Grinning broadly, he declared they would "just represent good citizens."

Duncan paid tribute to the "wonderful job" in uncovering details of the alleged misuse of payroll funds by William T. Evjue and Frederick Parker, editor and reporter, respectively, for the Madison newspaper.

Luther Leaguers Ready Annual District Parley

A program for the 17th annual Ohio District Luther League Convention to be held in Columbus during Thanksgiving weekend, Nov. 26 to 28, has been released by District President Gilbert Green.

Registration of an expected 500 young people will begin on Friday noon.

These delegates will be representing more than 5,500 Luther Leaguers throughout Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. Two full days of business and meetings are scheduled to follow in the convention headquarters, Christ Lutheran Church.

Especially noted among the five persons scheduled to speak are: Dr. H. L. Yochum, president of Capital university, and the Rev. Marcus Rieke, Youth Director of the American Lutheran church.

Speakers throughout the convention will follow the theme, "If Ye Love Me," presenting doctrines of Christian ideals to the assembled youth which they might carry to their respective home youth groups.

These gatherings are slated annually to elect officers for the following year and report yearly Luther League progress directly to its members. The inspiration and fellowship which delegates receive at these meetings has provided an effective union among all 200 Leagues in this district, according to League officers.

VISUAL EDUCATION

THE need for speed in imparting knowledge to military trainees was so imperative during the war years that great strides were made in visual education, particularly along medical lines.

The use of motion pictures has been advised by Navy doctors as a prime method for enabling medical men to keep up with developments in their profession. Since 1916 medical motion pictures have been used as an aid to instruction, though at that time such methods were considered unethical and unprofessional by many doctors.

During the past two years the number of films lent by the American Medical Association for use by schools and other groups has doubled. The result has been a great change in medical education. A large audience can witness a movie showing the hands of a great surgeon at their delicate tasks, where formerly only a few students could be close enough to the scene of action to view it properly. Wide use is made, too, of films on subjects such as physiology, hygiene, first aid and mental health.

It is said that instruction received through visual aids is more effective than that attained by other non-laboratory means. The image absorbed by the retina is indelibly imprinted on the mind, according to advocates of this method. The moving picture is a worthy addition to the other media of education, namely reading, reflection, stimulation of thought through discussion and the laboratory.

SELLING AUTOMOBILES

A HOUSE subcommittee has been delving into the practices employed in selling new and used automobiles over the past year or two. This is one congressional investigation which is not likely to attract much adverse public comment.

A Washington, D. C., salesman told the subcommittee that he always expected a tip from the customers when he sold a car, and that he didn't think $500 was an excessive tip. He said he had been a salesman for the same Washington firm for 20 years and had been receiving tips all that time.

Looking backward, perhaps nostalgically, we'll bet a new Fall hat that he wasn't getting any $500 tips from the purchasers of new automobiles in 1933.

We don't believe there is anybody living in outer space, and nobody seems able to tell us, but it probably does no harm to keep a weather eye on Mars and the moon, just in case.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

One of the problems faced by the Hoover Committee, which has been appointed to plan for the reorganization of the executive branch of the government, is the complexity of organs of government engaged in public works, river control, water conservation, natural resources, survey organizations and related work. A comprehensive plan for an area is almost impossible because of the multitude of bureaus and interests, the overlappings and conflicts.

The Hoover Committee asked Robert Moses, undoubtedly America's greatest authority on public works and a public official of outstanding ability, to devote himself to the task of preparing a study of the subject. As far back as 1922, a joint commission of Congress had recommended the establishment of a Public Works Department. Nothing came of it. President Hoover made a similar proposal in 1932; President Roosevelt made a similar proposal. But were ignored because of the entrenched power of vested interests whose principal concern is to keep the jobs they have.

Always, every effort to create an efficient organ of government to look after public works was defeated by an effective lobby of Army engineers who want to hold on to as much of that kind of work as they have for years had under their control. Public works have developed beyond the authority and capacity of the engineer corps of the Army, but they fight to retain their peacetime work. They are now setting up an attack on the Hoover report, in spite of the fact that one of the members of Mr. Moses's task force is former Secretary of War Robert Patterson, who is undoubtedly fully familiar with the virtues of the Army engineers.

The facts are that about $50,000,000,000 of public works projects are pending or in a state of proposal. No overall authority exists to decide which of these projects needs to be done now, which are immediately unnecessary but are to be considered for future developments, which are fantastic, politically or even corruptly designed. "Pork-barrel" politics play a great part in all this—the combine of government officials, members of Congress, and keen contractors.

The Army engineers are about 200 in number, but they have a staff of 34,000 civilians of whom a few thousand are civil engineers. The articulated theory is that those who are trained in the army engineer corps—military or civilian—receive a training which could be useful in time of war. In fact, of course, is that in time of war, engineers and other experts out of private enterprise are put into uniform for service, to return to civilian usefulness when the war is over. We have done extraordinarily well by this method. Certainly if the engineers worked in a Public Works Department, they could still be used in war. A very small part of our armed forces, from top to bottom, during the last war, came from the Regular Army.

The proposed Department of Public Works would include the bureaus of reclamation, of flood control, of public buildings, of highways, all the mineral resources agencies, the various bureaus in charge of water, and the survey branches of the government.

DIET AND HEALTH

The Cause of Edema Should Determine Its Treatment

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ORDINARILY, what is known as the fluid-balance of the body is very exactly controlled, so that, no matter how much is taken, the total amount in the tissues remains constant.

In certain diseased conditions, however, the body loses its ability to get rid of fluids with the result that great amounts collect in the tissues and body cavities. This condition, known to the average man as dropsy, goes under the medical name of edema.

Heart failure is one of the causes of edema; chronic kidney disease is another.

When the edema is due to failure of the heart to properly keep up the circulation, the circulation must be improved and the amount of salt taken reduced, but the fluids need not be restricted. For a short period it may be advisable to give the patient four or five glassfuls of milk daily, with not over one gram of salt each day. If the patient is undernourished and has a poor appetite, he sometimes may be allowed to add some salt to his food at mealtimes.

Mercurial Preparations

To aid in eliminating the fluid, certain mercurial preparations are injected which stimulate the action of the kidneys. These should not be used oftener than once in two weeks after the first few doses.

The patient should have a scale at home and keep a daily record of the weight, which will show whether or not the fluid is being eliminated.

The edema sometimes may continue even though the patient has been kept at rest in bed, has been given digitalis to slow and strengthen the heart-beat, and has had mercurials to increase the actions of the kidneys. In such cases, it is suggested that the fluid which may have collected in the abdomen be withdrawn by using a needle and syringe, and that a glucose solution then be placed in the cavity of the abdomen, withdrawing it from two to four hours later. This may help to eliminate the salt from the body.

When the edema is due to chronic kidney disease, the use of the mercurial preparations is of no value and may be dangerous. It is necessary in these cases to limit the water intake.

Another type of kidney disease, called nephrosis, may also cause a great deal of edema. In such cases, much protein is lost from the body through the urine. In this disorder, the diet must contain enough protein to make good the loss, but very little salt. Injections of concentrated serum albumin, taken from the blood of well people, is also of value.

Patients with edema require thorough study by a physician and should remain under medical care until the condition is alleviated.

All About Marriage

SYNOPSIS

Lovely young Donna Colwell had developed an almost psychotic aversion to marriage. She vowed she loved Mark Banister, her devoted swain over the years and said that because she did love him she could never become his wife. Her parents were particularly distressed by this decision, for they hoped Mark would take the place of their only son lost in the war. Donna seemed perfectly content to go on being a New York career girl, circulating socially, keeping occasional dates with Mark.

CHAPTER SEVEN

WHEN DONNA had first suggested taking a room in New York to circumvent the hazards of commutation, it had seemed entirely reasonable and nearly always desirable. It was during the war, the time of gas rationing, car pooling, crowded busses, congested subways. Her father also commuted from New Jersey to New York but their hours did not coincide and his business required him to spend at least a week every month in Chicago. Because of the shortage of help she was frequently obliged to work late at night and make the long trek to New Jersey at hours that her mother, along with the police departments of two states, considered downright dangerous for an attractive young woman.

It was at a home dinner on Saturday night, alone with her parents, that she first launched the proposal and she did it with a casual offhandedness that made it seem entirely tentative and subject to debate. What would they think of her taking a room in town for the nights she had to work late? She knew some business girls who were going to have a vacancy in their apartment and she could have the room if she wanted it. Under interested pressure for details, her account of the unprecedented opportunity to acquire comfortable and reasonable New York accommodations gave the impression of a heaven-sent boon.

Six girls of her acquaintance had solved their drastic housing predicaments by taking a large apartment together, pooling both the advantages and the expenses. It was a "nice apartment" at a "good address." The girls were high-class, strictly top-notch. One, withdrawing from business to enter matrimony, was creating the vacancy and although other friends were clamoring for her quarters, they had unanimously agreed to give Donna first chance at it.

The decision had to be made promptly. The remaining five members of the small project, though "nice," were strictly "business." They did not want to shoulder the expenses of their departing collaborator for so much as a day and there was no necessity for doing so. Beds, with or without private rooms accompanying, were in hot demand. That this bed carried a room along with it raised it to the status of luxury.

"Should I should, or should I shouldn't?" she asked.

Speaking in terms of finance, there would be very little difference, considering transportation, taxicabs and dinners in town. In the apartment, the girls bought their own food and had their breakfasts and dinners en famille. And no extravagance. And, as she said, it would be convenient to have a dumping place in town for all the papers and books required in her work in radio research.

"I will have to furnish my own bed and bath linens, though, and my own blankets," she explained. "I have to make my own bed, too, and keep my room tidy. I fancy they are a little fussy about some things. I will have to pay for my share of the food when I am in town and lend a hand at the shopping and odd chores and what-not. But as soon as we get back on a five-day week there will be only four nights of it anyhow. And maybe being in town I will have extra time to do some extraneous work on the side, to stand me in good stead when the soldiers come marching home and want all the jobs back. Maybe I can even wangle a raise."

Reasonable and desirable. Her parents could not deny it. They were pleased rather than disconcerted and when Donna went to the telephone and dialed a New York number, they listened closely, but they were smiling.

"Hello. Sammy? Donna. When does the rent start? . . . Yes, Mother and Dad think it is a grand idea. . . . Next week? Okay. If we can scare up a coupon I'll pop in with my bathrobe and toothbrush some time Saturday afternoon but I won't be in to stay until Sunday evening. Usually I stay at home Sunday night but I'll strain a point this time, to make sure my claim is properly staked. . . . Thanks, Sammy, I'll mail you a check Monday morning. 'By, now."

Smiling, she returned to the table. "They're very glad I'm coming and that, my love, is a compliment. They're really snooty about who moves in there."

"Did you say 'Sammy'?"

Donna laughed. "Samuela, darling. Samuela Ingram. A most respectable name. You've heard of old Sam Ingram, haven't you? Boston Back Bay. Well, he had this daughter instead of a son, so she is Samuela. The girl in my future room moves out next Friday so I start paying rent on Saturday."

On the whole, they were relieved and gratified. On nights when she needed to stay in town, she had a place to stay. And she could still come home any night she wanted to. She would get more sleep too, for the commuting took an hour and a half each way. Three hours of quiet rest and comfort in place of the bustle and rush of commuting!

Donna was very casual about the whole thing. When her mother asked if they should begin packing up and sorting out the things she should take with her, Donna turned on her in gay accusal.

"Are you trying to get rid of me?" she demanded. "I'm not moving out! I don't have to pack up! I live here. Or had you forgotten?"

With Donna taking it like that, there could be no sense of change or upheaval. Just something reasonable and desirable, and attained by unbelievably good luck.

On Saturday her father dutifully produced a coupon for gas to facilitate her haphazard removal but even then there was nothing upsetting about it. It was not nearly so tragic as when she first went away to college. They had wept then, and Donna had wept with them. She chucked a battered suitcase into the trunk compartment of the car and tossed in a few books alongside. She laid the stack of linens and blankets neatly on the rear seat, laughing at the "Donna Collwell" in red markers which her mother had painstakingly attached to those rare items.

"Get me a laundry hamper, Mom," she said gleefully. "I'll bring my messed-up linens home for their sudsing."

There was nothing to be downcast about and nobody was downcast. Donna frowned when her mother put an armful of garden flowers on the seat, and Dad trudged out with a basket of peaches and tomatoes and green peppers. Donna frowned. But the frown was all between her eyebrows, while her lips smiled and her dark eyes sparkled golden glints.

"I'm going to charge them for these," she said grimly. "They told me this is stee-rictly business from beginning to end and I'm not going to begin coddling them."

She was at home again in ample time for dinner.

"They pulled a fast one on me," she reported cheerfully. "Strictly business and then some! They divide the rent but it is on a preferential basis. Sammy has the master bedroom and she pays two dollars extra for that. Another girl has the small sitting room adjoining, and she and Sammy have that bathroom between them. That girl pays a dollar extra for rating half a bath. The three other girls have the ordinary rooms and go thirds on their bath. Those are the cheap quarters. The prize accommodation is—guess what? The maid's room off the kitchen. It has its own absolutely private bath, not very big and not a bit elegant, but they have fixed it up very cutely and it's quite nice. They charge two dollars extra for that. Nona Forham had it but she wants to cut down on her overhead so she talked me into swapping with her. I figured the private bath was well worth it, and the room is farther away and less accessible so she is moving out and I am moving in."

Her parents could but agree that such privacy was well worth two dollars. Donna had always been careful with money. She took her time, shopped carefully and always got her money's worth. Her allowance, starting with ten cents a week when she entered kindergarten, had increased through the years but from the beginning she had husbanded it shrewdly. When she was receiving thirty-five cents a week and her brother David and his friend, Mark Banister, were collecting a dollar each, many times, by the end of the week, they were borrowing nickels and dimes from her.

When she went to college, she was given the responsibility of her first checking account and never failed to make her deposits go just a little farther than was required. When she collected her first salary after starting to work in New York, she smilingly shoved back to her father the weekly check he passed across the table to her.

"Economic unit now, Dad. Standing on my own little trilbies and all that hooey."

He nodded, laughing, and pocketed the check. "When you want back on the domestic pay roll, just serve notice," he said.

She had never gone back on the domestic pay roll.

But it's nice to know that at least one nation is training its fliers for nothing more frightening than a battle of music.

The visiting musicians expect to call on the President. If Petrillo is busy, they'll try Truman.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

John Mason

NEW YORK—In spite of the criminal assault committed upon it by the movie industry, James Thurber's The Secret Life of Walter Mitty likely is the greatest short story ever written. However, Mitty is fiction, and you all know by this time what is stranger than that. I give you today a truthful essay that makes Mitty seem pallid—the double life of John Mason.

John Mason might be called the poor man's Jekyll-Hyde. By daytime he is a quiet, gentlemanly soul who writes promotion copy for the world's largest newspaper syndicate. He came to New York from Cleveland about a year ago and promptly distinguished himself by his courtliness, his intelligence, his conservatively-striped neckties and the fact that he never raised his voice.

Last night, I saw the Other John Mason. For in the evenings, he amuses himself, if that is the proper word, by acting as an instructor to assorted introverts who have taken Dale Carnegie's personality development course.

The session last night was held in a restaurant on East 42nd street, and the students, ranging in age from about 20 to possibly 70, were on hand for one specific purpose—to learn how to speak in front of people, to Hold Them in the Palm of One's Hand.

On the stroke of 8, Mason came in. There was a gleam in his eye I never had seen before. I virtually fell off my chair when he went up to the front of the room and in a loud, clear voice announced that if the students did not distinguish themselves, "I personally will pound your skulls in." This—Dale Carnegie can do this to a man, I thought?

About 50 students were on hand, and to start off with, Mason lined them up in front, five at a time, and had them give a short speech that went "I know men in the ranks who are going to stay in the ranks? Why? I'll TELL you why! Simply because they haven't the ability to GET THINGS DONE!"

The first five gave out with this volley, and Walter Mitty-Mason, raging like a tequilla-fed tiger, shouted "That was miserable! Again!"

They tried again, one man snarling out the message like Edward G. Robinson, but Mason was unsatisfied. He became icy, cool, Robert Montgomery. "We may have to do this six times," he said quietly, menacingly.

• • • •

IT SEEMS STRANGE THAT IN THIS CITY, which is nothing if not brassy, that there should be timid souls, but it is so. One of Mason's students last night was a tall, thin, banker-type man of 50 or so, to whom every word spoken in public came agonizingly. He sweated and labored and was pretty bad, but the Other John Mason assured me he would be another Huey Long when the 17-lesson course was over.

"I know men in the ranks" kept going on and on, and Mason, stripping off his jacket, crouched balefully at the side and heckled. "Hit your palms for emphasis!" he exclaimed. "I want to see red blood on those hands!"

Maliciously, he told some students they were terrible and others were awful. I must report truthfully that when he unbent, and told one he was good, the praised one was as pleased as if he'd picked up 90 on an algebra test.

• • • •

THE WINNERS OF THE "I KNOW men in the ranks" were given cough drops by Mason, and then each student got up in turn for the next routine, an airing of his pet gripe, accompanied by loud smacks on a table with rolled-up newspapers.

The students got their hearts into this one. "I HATE RADIO COMMENTATORS!" one mild-looking man screamed, as he belabored the table. Another one yelled in anguish that "We don't have the right kind of vigor for this course. Why? WE DON'T GET THE RIGHT FOOD!"

The list of pet hates was remarkable, including: Republicans, Democrats, taxi-drivers, tardy people, busy signals on telephones, the 10-cent fare, garagemen, commuting, potroast three Monday nights in a row, rent ceilings, laundries, five-cent cigars, and people who open windows on cold days. One lady in black hissed, "I hate John Mason," and threw her rolled-up paper at him with intent to kill.

The Other John Mason does this strange work sometimes as much as four times a week, making flying trips to Philadelphia or Baltimore on occasion. I buttonholed Mrs. Mason, a calm and beautiful brunet, and asked her what effect his sinister career has had on their home life.

"Well," she said, sadly, "he doesn't lose weight doing this, but he keeps getting up at 3 a. m. to take hot baths."

As I tip-toed from the room, a student was pounding the table and, groping for something to say, howled indignantly, "Do you know what someone just asked me? He asked me if OUR INSTRUCTOR WAS NUTTY!" I left without hearing the answer to that one, but I don't think Dale Carnegie honestly would care. The Other John Mason is a Carnegie gold mine.

VISUAL EDUCATION

THE need for speed in imparting knowledge to military trainees was so imperative during the war years that great strides were made in visual education, particularly along medical lines.

The use of motion pictures has been advised by Navy doctors as a prime method for enabling medical men to keep up with developments in their profession. Since 1916 medical motion pictures have been used as an aid to instruction, though at that time such methods were considered unethical and unprofessional by many doctors.

During the past two years the number of films lent by the American Medical Association for use by schools and other groups has doubled. The result has been a great change in medical education. A large audience can witness a movie showing the hands of a great surgeon at their delicate tasks, where formerly only a few students could be close enough to the scene of action to view it properly. Wide use is made, too, of films on subjects such as physiology, hygiene, first aid and mental health.

It is said that instruction received through visual aids is more effective than that attained by other non-laboratory means. The image absorbed by the retina is indelibly imprinted on the mind, according to advocates of this method. The moving picture is a worthy addition to the other media of education, namely reading, reflection, stimulation of thought through discussion and the laboratory.

SELLING AUTOMOBILES

A HOUSE subcommittee has been delving into the practices employed in selling new and used automobiles over the past year or two. This is one congressional investigation which is not likely to attract much adverse public comment.

A Washington, D. C., salesman told the subcommittee that he always expected a tip from the customers when he sold a car, and that he didn't think $500 was an excessive tip. He said he had been a salesman for the same Washington firm for 20 years and had been receiving tips all that time.

Looking backward, perhaps nostalgically, we'll bet a new Fall hat that he wasn't getting any $500 tips from the purchasers of new automobiles in 1933.

We don't believe there is anybody living in outer space, and nobody seems able to tell us, but it probably does no harm to keep a weather eye on Mars and the moon, just in case.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

One of the problems faced by the Hoover Committee, which has been appointed to plan for the reorganization of the executive branch of the government, is the complexity of organs of government engaged in public works, river control, water conservation, natural resources, survey organizations and related work. A comprehensive plan for an area is almost impossible because of the multitude of bureaus and interests, the overlappings and conflicts.

The Hoover Committee asked Robert Moses, undoubtedly America's greatest authority on public works and a public official of outstanding ability, to devote himself to the task of preparing a study of the subject. As far back as 1922, a joint commission of Congress had recommended the establishment of a Public Works Department. Nothing came of it. President Hoover made a similar proposal in 1932; President Roosevelt made a similar proposal. But were ignored because of the entrenched power of vested interests whose principal concern is to keep the jobs they have.

Always, every effort to create an efficient organ of government to look after public works was defeated by an effective lobby of Army engineers who want to hold on to as much of that kind of work as they have for years had under their control. Public works have developed beyond the authority and capacity of the engineer corps of the Army, but they fight to retain their peacetime work. They are now setting up an attack on the Hoover report, in spite of the fact that one of the members of Mr. Moses's task force is former Secretary of War Robert Patterson, who is undoubtedly fully familiar with the virtues of the Army engineers.

The facts are that about $50,000,000,000 of public works projects are pending or in a state of proposal. No overall authority exists to decide which of these projects needs to be done now, which are immediately unnecessary but are to be considered for future developments, which are fantastic, politically or even corruptly designed. "Pork-barrel" politics play a great part in all this—the combine of government officials, members of Congress, and keen contractors.

The Army engineers are about 200 in number, but they have a staff of 34,000 civilians of whom a few thousand are civil engineers. The articulated theory is that those who are trained in the army engineer corps—military or civilian—receive a training which could be useful in time of war. In fact, of course, is that in time of war, engineers and other experts out of private enterprise are put into uniform for service, to return to civilian usefulness when the war is over. We have done extraordinarily well by this method. Certainly if the engineers worked in a Public Works Department, they could still be used in war. A very small part of our armed forces, from top to bottom, during the last war, came from the Regular Army.

The proposed Department of Public Works would include the bureaus of reclamation, of flood control, of public buildings, of highways, all the mineral resources agencies, the various bureaus in charge of water, and the survey branches of the government.

DIET AND HEALTH

The Cause of Edema Should Determine Its Treatment

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ORDINARILY, what is known as the fluid-balance of the body is very exactly controlled, so that, no matter how much is taken, the total amount in the tissues remains constant.

In certain diseased conditions, however, the body loses its ability to get rid of fluids with the result that great amounts collect in the tissues and body cavities. This condition, known to the average man as dropsy, goes under the medical name of edema.

Heart failure is one of the causes of edema; chronic kidney disease is another.

When the edema is due to failure of the heart to properly keep up the circulation, the circulation must be improved and the amount of salt taken reduced, but the fluids need not be restricted. For a short period it may be advisable to give the patient four or five glassfuls of milk daily, with not over one gram of salt each day. If the patient is undernourished and has a poor appetite, he sometimes may be allowed to add some salt to his food at mealtimes.

Mercurial Preparations

To aid in eliminating the fluid, certain mercurial preparations are injected which stimulate the action of the kidneys. These should not be used oftener than once in two weeks after the first few doses.

The patient should have a scale at home and keep a daily record of the weight, which will show whether or not the fluid is being eliminated.

The edema sometimes may continue even though the patient has been kept at rest in bed, has been given digitalis to slow and strengthen the heart-beat, and has had mercurials to increase the actions of the kidneys. In such cases, it is suggested that the fluid which may have collected in the abdomen be withdrawn by using a needle and syringe, and that a glucose solution then be placed in the cavity of the abdomen, withdrawing it from two to four hours later. This may help to eliminate the salt from the body.

When the edema is due to chronic kidney disease, the use of the mercurial preparations is of no value and may be dangerous. It is necessary in these cases to limit the water intake.

Another type of kidney disease, called nephrosis, may also cause a great deal of edema. In such cases, much protein is lost from the body through the urine. In this disorder, the diet must contain enough protein to make good the loss, but very little salt. Injections of concentrated serum albumin, taken from the blood of well people, is also of value.

Patients with edema require thorough study by a physician and should remain under medical care until the condition is alleviated.

All About Marriage

SYNOPSIS

Lovely young Donna Collwell had developed an almost psychotic aversion to marriage. She vowed she loved Mark Banister, her devoted swain over the years and said that because she did love him she could never become his wife. Her parents were particularly distressed by this decision, for they hoped Mark would take the place of their only son lost in the war. Donna seemed perfectly content to go on being a New York career girl, circulating socially, keeping occasional dates with Mark.

CHAPTER SEVEN

WHEN DONNA had first suggested taking a room in New York to circumvent the hazards of commutation, it had seemed entirely reasonable and nearly always desirable. It was during the war, the time of gas rationing, car pooling, crowded busses, congested subways. Her father also commuted from New Jersey to New York but their hours did not coincide and his business required him to spend at least a week every month in Chicago. Because of the shortage of help she was frequently obliged to work late at night and make the long trek to New Jersey at hours that her mother, along with the police departments of two states, considered downright dangerous for an attractive young woman.

It was at a home dinner on Saturday night, alone with her parents, that she first launched the proposal and she did it with a casual offhandedness that made it seem entirely tentative and subject to debate. What would they think of her taking a room in town for the nights she had to work late? She knew some business girls who were going to have a vacancy in their apartment and she could have the room if she wanted it. Under interested pressure for details, her account of the unprecedented opportunity to acquire comfortable and reasonable New York accommodations gave the impression of a heaven-sent boon.

Six girls of her acquaintance had solved their drastic housing predicaments by taking a large apartment together, pooling both the advantages and the expenses. It was a "nice apartment" at a "good address." The girls were high-class, strictly top-notch. One, withdrawing from business to enter matrimony, was creating the vacancy and although other friends were clamoring for her quarters, they had unanimously agreed to give Donna first chance at it.

The decision had to be made promptly. The remaining five members of the small project, though "nice," were strictly "business." They did not want to shoulder the expenses of their departing collaborator for so much as a day and there was no necessity for doing so. Beds, with or without private rooms accompanying, were in hot demand. That this bed carried a room along with it raised it to the status of luxury.

"Should I should, or should I shouldn't?" she asked.

Speaking in terms of finance, there would be very little difference, considering transportation, taxicabs and dinners in town. In the apartment, the girls bought their own food and had their breakfasts and dinners en famille. And no extravagance. And, as she said, it would be convenient to have a dumping place in town for all the papers and books required in her work in radio research.

"I will have to furnish my own bed and bath linens, though, and my own blankets," she explained. "I have to make my own bed, too, and keep my room tidy. I fancy they are a little fussy about some things. I will have to pay for my share of the food when I am in town and lend a hand at the shopping and odd chores and what-not. But as soon as we get back on a five-day week there will be only four nights of it anyhow. And maybe being in town I will have extra time to do some extraneous work on the side, to stand me in good stead when the soldiers come marching home and want all the jobs back. Maybe I can even wangle a raise."

Reasonable and desirable. Her parents could not deny it. They were pleased rather than disconcerted and when Donna went to the telephone and dialed a New York number, they listened closely, but they were smiling.

"Hello. Sammy? Donna. When does the rent start? . . . Yes, Mother and Dad think it is a grand idea. . . . Next week? Okay. If we can scare up a coupon I'll pop in with my bathrobe and toothbrush some time Saturday afternoon but I won't be in to stay until Sunday evening. Usually I stay at home Sunday night but I'll strain a point this time, to make sure my claim is properly staked. . . . Thanks, Sammy, I'll mail you a check Monday morning. 'By, now."

Smiling, she returned to the table. "They're very glad I'm coming and that, my love, is a compliment. They're really snooty about who moves in there."

"Did you say 'Sammy'?"

Donna laughed. "Samuela, darling. Samuela Ingram. A most respectable name. You've heard of old Sam Ingram, haven't you? Boston Back Bay. Well, he had this daughter instead of a son, so she is Samuela. The girl in my future room moves out next Friday so I start paying rent on Saturday."

On the whole, they were relieved and gratified. On nights when she needed to stay in town, she had a place to stay. And she could still come home any night she wanted to. She would get more sleep too, for the commuting took an hour and a half each way. Three hours of quiet rest and comfort in place of the bustle and rush of commuting!

Donna was very casual about the whole thing. When her mother asked if they should begin packing up and sorting out the things she should take with her, Donna turned on her in gay accusal.

"Are you trying to get rid of me?" she demanded. "I'm not moving out! I don't have to pack up! I live here. Or had you forgotten?"

With Donna taking it like that, there could be no sense of change or upheaval. Just something reasonable and desirable, and attained by unbelievably good luck.

On Saturday her father dutifully produced a coupon for gas to facilitate her haphazard removal but even then there was nothing upsetting about it. There was nothing to be downcast about and nobody was downcast. Donna frowned when her mother put an armful of garden flowers on the seat, and Dad trudged out with a basket of peaches and tomatoes and green peppers. Donna frowned. But the frown was all between her eyebrows, while her lips smiled and her dark eyes sparkled golden glints.

"I'm going to charge them for these," she said grimly. "They told me this is stee-rictly business from beginning to end and I'm not going to begin coddling them."

She was at home again in ample time for dinner.

"They pulled a fast one on me," she reported cheerfully. "Strictly business and then some! They divide the rent but it is on a preferential basis. I figured the private bath was well worth it, and the room is farther away and less accessible so she is moving out and I am moving in."

Her parents could but agree that such privacy was well worth two dollars. Donna had always been careful with money. She took her time, shopped carefully and always got her money's worth. Her allowance, starting with ten cents a week when she entered kindergarten, had increased through the years but from the beginning she had husbanded it shrewdly. When she was receiving thirty-five cents a week and her brother David and his friend, Mark Banister, were collecting a dollar each, many times, by the end of the week, they were borrowing nickels and dimes from her.

When she went to college, she was given the responsibility of her first checking account and never failed to make her deposits go just a little farther than was required. The disposition will be happy and the life successful.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

John Mason

NEW YORK—In spite of the criminal assault committed upon it by the movie industry, James Thurber's The Secret Life of Walter Mitty likely is the greatest short story ever written. However, Mitty is fiction, and you all know by this time what is stranger than that. I give you today a truthful essay that makes Mitty seem pallid—the double life of John Mason.

John Mason might be called the poor man's Jekyll-Hyde. By daytime he is a quiet, gentlemanly soul who writes promotion copy for the world's largest newspaper syndicate. He came to New York from Cleveland about a year ago and promptly distinguished himself by his courtliness, his intelligence, his conservatively-striped neckties and the fact that he never raised his voice.

Last night, I saw the Other John Mason. For in the evenings, he amuses himself, if that is the proper word, by acting as an instructor to assorted introverts who have taken Dale Carnegie's personality development course.

The session last night was held in a restaurant on East 42nd street, and the students, ranging in age from about 20 to possibly 70, were on hand for one specific purpose—to learn how to speak in front of people, to Hold Them in the Palm of One's Hand.

On the stroke of 8, Mason came in. There was a gleam in his eye I never had seen before. I virtually fell off my chair when he went up to the front of the room and in a loud, clear voice announced that if the students did not distinguish themselves, "I personally will pound your skulls in." This—Dale Carnegie can do this to a man, I thought?

About 50 students were on hand, and to start off with, Mason lined them up in front, five at a time, and had them give a short speech that went "I know men in the ranks who are going to stay in the ranks? Why? I'll TELL you why! Simply because they haven't the ability to GET THINGS DONE!"

The first five gave out with this volley, and Walter Mitty-Mason, raging like a tequilla-fed tiger, shouted "That was miserable! Again!"

They tried again, one man snarling out the message like Edward G. Robinson, but Mason was unsatisfied. He became icy, cool, Robert Montgomery. "We may have to do this six times," he said quietly, menacingly.

* * * *

IT SEEMS STRANGE THAT IN THIS CITY, which is nothing if not brassy, that there should be timid souls, but it is so. One of Mason's students last night was a tall, thin, banker-type man of 50 or so, to whom every word spoken in public came agonizingly. He sweated and labored and was pretty bad, but the Other John Mason assured me he would be another Huey Long when the 17-lesson course was over.

"I know men in the ranks" kept going on and on, and Mason, stripping off his jacket, crouched balefully at the side and heckled. "Hit your palms for emphasis!" he exclaimed. "I want to see red blood on those hands!"

Maliciously, he told some students they were terrible and others were awful. I must report truthfully that when he unbent, and told one he was good, the praised one was as pleased as if he'd picked up 90 on an algebra test.

* * * *

THE WINNERS OF THE "I KNOW men in the ranks" were given cough drops by Mason, and then each student got up in turn for the next routine, an airing of his pet gripe, accompanied by loud smacks on a table with rolled-up newspapers.

The students got their hearts into this one. "I HATE RADIO COMMENTATORS!" one mild-looking man screamed, as he belabored the table. Another one yelled in anguish that "We don't have the right kind of vigor for this course. Why? WE DON'T GET THE RIGHT FOOD!"

The list of pet hates was remarkable, including: Republicans, Democrats, taxi-drivers, tardy people, busy signals on telephones, the 10-cent fare, garagemen, commuting, potroast three Monday nights in a row, rent ceilings, laundries, five-cent cigars, and people who open windows on cold days. One lady in black hissed, "I hate John Mason," and threw her rolled-up paper at him with intent to kill.

The Other John Mason does this strange work sometimes as much as four times a week, making flying trips to Philadelphia or Baltimore on occasion. I buttonholed Mrs. Mason, a calm and beautiful brunet, and asked her what effect his sinister career has had on their home life.

"Well," she said, sadly, "he doesn't lose weight doing this, but he keeps getting up at 3 a. m. to take hot baths."

As I tip-toed from the room, a student was pounding the table and, groping for something to say, howled indignantly, "Do you know what someone just asked me? He asked me if OUR INSTRUCTOR WAS NUTTY!" I left without hearing the answer to that one, but I don't think Dale Carnegie honestly would care. The Other John Mason is a Carnegie gold mine.

Household Hints

The glove habit is a good one to acquire for the protection of hands and nails. Slip on work gloves before doing household chores. Once a week, cream hands and wear cotton gloves while the cream is drying.

If you are buying mahogany furniture, you can make sure you are getting genuine mahogany or solid mahogany by looking for the official tag or label put out by the Mahogany Association under a penalty contract. All furniture made of the genuine wood may not bear these labels or tags, but all furniture with them is genuine mahogany or solid genuine mahogany, as they may indicate. Another good rule to follow in buying genuine mahogany, or any other furniture, is to insist the description as given by the salesman be put on the invoice. If the furniture is not as represented, you will find it out before it is too late. If the improper designation does go on the invoice, then the buyer has definite evidence on which action may be taken.

General purpose electrical circuits can carry about 1725 watts, but should not carry more than 1600 for safety. If you are worried about overloading your circuits with new electrical appliances, consult a wiring expert or contractor. As a general rule it is a warning signal if lights flicker when you add to the load, or if your appliances don't work as speedily and efficiently as you expect.

A perfumed shower attachment, designed to give you a sweet-smelling fragrance, is a nice addition to your bathroom. It is a plastic slotted container and is easily installed by removing the shower head. Before each shower you place a tablet in the slot of the container and the scent lasts about seven minutes.

WRITING A NEW CHAPTER in the what-will-people-think-of-next records is this amazing street scene in Phoenix, Ariz., where chambermaids are engaged in a contest for the title of the fastest bedmaker. The beds, all standard size, were taken from various resort and commercial hotels and, while crowds watched, the maids were timed. The fastest time was one minute, 7½ seconds. (International Soundphoto)

In Memoriam

In loving memory of wife and mother Stella I. May who passed away 3 years ago today Nov. 19, 1945.

This day brings back sad memories, of our loved one gone to rest. And those who think of her each day, are the ones who loved her best.

No one knows the silent heartaches.
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief we bear in silence.
For the one we loved so well.
Friends may think that we forget her.
When they see us smile,
But little do they know the sorrow,
That is hid behind a smile.

Husband and children.

UNLESS you are fortunate enough to be able to afford a complete service of Sterling silver tableware from the start we suggest you follow the place setting plan. Instead of purchasing just "any pieces" you build by place settings. Start with as many as your budget permits then add weekly, monthly or on gift occasions. "Pendant of Fruit" a handsome sterling pattern by Lunt Silversmiths would grace any table. A four piece place setting of this beautiful silverware would cost just $18.16.

Petrol Supply May Run Low

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20—A warning that sometime in the future the United States must turn to natural gas, oil shale and coal for its gasoline supply, was sounded here today.

T. A. Boyd, of the General Motors research laboratories, made the statement in an address at the 75th jubilee celebration of the Ohio State University Chemistry Department. Asserting that the chemist will play an even greater role in the petroleum refining industry, Boyd declared:

"It is not reasonable to expect the supply of petroleum to last indefinitely. And, if and when petroleum fails, we are going to have to fall back on other sources for liquid fuels."

SOUTHWORTH HAS ANSWER

Leo In Trouble Again; Will Talk To Chandler

NEW YORK nov. 20 — Leo Durocher is in hot water again. And the chances are better than fair he may move from the hot water right into Commissioner Happy Chandler's pet dog house.

The trouble this time grows out of the Giants, at Durocher's instigation, signing Freddy Fitzsimmons as coach.

This has led Chandler to call both Fitzsimmons and Durocher before him for a hearing to be held just before the annual major league meetings in Chicago next month.

The commissioner wants to know if the Giants signed Fitz while he was still on the reserve list of the Boston Braves.

If so, the signing was clearly a violation of baseball law and Chandler has been quick to punish any infraction of those laws. Witness his recent action in making nine members of the Detroit farm chain free agents.

THE GIANTS recently announced they had signed Frank Frisch and Fitzsimmons as coaches for next year.

The commissioner has no bone to pick with the signing of Frisch. Frisch's contract as a baseball broadcaster had expired and he was free to sign with anybody.

Durocher wanted him as a third base coach to succeed Travis Jackson, and as an instructor of his wobbly infielders. Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, promptly obliged.

Leo also was eager to land Fitz as first base coach, general morale builder and instructor of pitchers.

So far so good. Nobody can blame Durocher for seeking both men. Fitz is and always was in his pitching days, a born fighter. He can and does add fighting spirit to a club. He is a master at teaching young pitchers.

There is a possibility that Chandler might overlook the signing of Fitzsimmons even if the fat man was on the Braves' reserve list when signed, provided the Braves make no objection.

It may be that Billy Southworth, manager of the Braves, is willing to relinquish all claims to Fitzsimmons.

But if Billy wants to hold him, and Chandler rules he was on the reserve list when signed by the Giants, then both Durocher and the Giants are in for a rough session.

In that event, the least they could expect from Chandler would be to have him cancel the deal and send Fitz back to the Braves.

Chandler suspended Durocher for the entire season of 1947 because of the famous rhubarb between Larry MacPhail of the Yanks and Branch Rickey of the Dodgers.

It is well known that Chandler is not one of Durocher's greatest admirers and therefore Durocher is not likely to get any special consideration at the hands of the commissioner.

Big Pickaway Notches 16th

Big Pickaway, champions of the county basketball league, Friday night racked up its 16th straight victory against loop opposition as it trimmed Darby, 59-27.

Coach Robert Seward's charges won all their 10 games in league play last year, added three more in grabbing the county tournament and notched little Darby this week as its third victim of the 1948-49 season.

Big gun of the Pickaway attack was Ned Wolfe who sent 20 points through the nets.

But the Pickaway aggregation did not fare as well in its reserve and eighth grade battles. Darby tromped all over the Pickaway juniors, 45-16, while the Darby graders edged the Pickaway junior high, 21-18.

Washington C. H., Bexley In Tie

Washington C. H. and Columbus Bexley battled to a scoreless tie on a slippery Fayette County field Friday night.

The Blue Lions, whom Circleville tipped from the undefeated ranks a week ago, muffed his lone opportunity to score. It came in the fading minutes of the first half when a downfield drive bogged down on Bexley's three-yard-line.

Bexley failed to score on two near-payoff drives, both ending on the Blue Lion four.

Only one forward pass was completed the entire game. Four aerial thrusts were intercepted.

New Holland Swamps Scioto

New Holland's Bulldogs racked up its third victory in Pickaway County League by thoroughly trouncing Scioto, 65-14.

Refusing to close the gates of mercy, New Holland's crew rolled up the huge margin and thus established itself as the team to watch in loop competition.

Paced by Gene Ankrom with 23 points, the Bulldog defense was better than its steamroller offense. It held Scioto to three points in the first quarter, only one in the last.

Scioto claimed one consolation during the evening. Its reserve team clipped New Holland's subs, 33-25.

Ring Promoters Want Cerdan

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — The New York-New Jersey promotional war for control of the nation's big-money boxing centered today on France's Marcel Cerdan, middleweight champion of the world.

Cerdan is under contract to make his next title defense for the Tournament of Champions, under whose auspices he took the crown from Tony Zale last September.

However, both the T. of C. and the 20th Century Sporting Club claim to have the Frenchman signed for over-the-weight, nontitle bouts in January.

In other words, everything would be put into one department of government that organically belonged there. There would be no overlapping of departmental authority, no conflict of policy over a single project, no duplication of effort, no multiplying of personnel and costs, no "empire building."

The Hoover report, as item by item appears, will be viciously attacked by vested interests. Fortunes have been made out of the inefficiency of governmental operations. Men have built powers in government by holding on to authority even if great damage is done because of their selfishness. The present confusions result in the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars as the Hoover report will show when it is published.

There was a time when the American people were rich, when the national debt was trifling and taxes low. We could afford the luxury of inefficiency, confusion and waste. We are not in that condition any longer. A few hundred million dollars saved counts now in the United States of America. Savings here and there can mount to a few billions each year. It counts.

There are more than 600 varieties of fish in the waters around the Greater Miami area, Florida.

English Horses Arrive For Test

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — Two English-bred three-year-olds from the Aga Khan's racing stables arrived in New York by plane from London presumably to race against America's champion, Citation.

Nathoo, 1948 Irish Derby winner, and Noor completed the North Atlantic flight last night.

Racing observers believe that Nathoo and Noor will be entered against Citation in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap Feb. 26.

UNLESS you are fortunate enough to be able to afford a complete service of Sterling silver tableware from the start we suggest you follow the place setting plan. Instead of purchasing just "any pieces" you build by place settings. Start with as many as your budget permits then add weekly, monthly or on gift occasions. "Pendant of Fruit" a handsome sterling pattern by Lunt Silversmiths would grace any table. A four piece place setting of this beautiful silverware would cost just $18.16.

Petrol Supply May Run Low

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20—A warning that sometime in the future the United States must turn to natural gas, oil shale and coal for its gasoline supply, was sounded here today.

T. A. Boyd, of the General Motors research laboratories, made the statement in an address at the 75th jubilee celebration of the Ohio State University Chemistry Department. Asserting that the chemist will play an even greater role in the petroleum refining industry, Boyd declared:

"It is not reasonable to expect the supply of petroleum to last indefinitely. And, if and when petroleum fails, we are going to have to fall back on other sources for liquid fuels."

New Holland Swamps Scioto

New Holland's Bulldogs racked up its third victory in Pickaway County League by thoroughly trouncing Scioto, 65-14.

Refusing to close the gates of mercy, New Holland's crew rolled up the huge margin and thus established itself as the team to watch in loop competition.

Paced by Gene Ankrom with 23 points, the Bulldog defense was better than its steamroller offense. It held Scioto to three points in the first quarter, only one in the last.

Scioto claimed one consolation during the evening. Its reserve team clipped New Holland's subs, 33-25.

Ring Promoters Want Cerdan

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — The New York-New Jersey promotional war for control of the nation's big-money boxing centered today on France's Marcel Cerdan, middleweight champion of the world.

Cerdan is under contract to make his next title defense for the Tournament of Champions, under whose auspices he took the crown from Tony Zale last September.

However, both the T. of C. and the 20th Century Sporting Club claim to have the Frenchman signed for over-the-weight, nontitle bouts in January.

In other words, everything would be put into one department of government that organically belonged there. There would be no overlapping of departmental authority, no conflict of policy over a single project, no duplication of effort, no multiplying of personnel and costs, no "empire building."

The Hoover report, as item by item appears, will be viciously attacked by vested interests. Fortunes have been made out of the inefficiency of governmental operations. Men have built powers in government by holding on to authority even if great damage is done because of their selfishness. The present confusions result in the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars as the Hoover report will show when it is published.

There was a time when the American people were rich, when the national debt was trifling and taxes low. We could afford the luxury of inefficiency, confusion and waste. We are not in that condition any longer. A few hundred million dollars saved counts now in the United States of America. Savings here and there can mount to a few billions each year. It counts.

There are more than 600 varieties of fish in the waters around the Greater Miami area, Florida.

SOUTHWORTH HAS ANSWER

Leo In Trouble Again; Will Talk To Chandler

NEW YORK nov. 20 — Leo Durocher is in hot water again. And the chances are better than fair he may move from the hot water right into Commissioner Happy Chandler's pet dog house.

The trouble this time grows out of the Giants, at Durocher's instigation, signing Freddy Fitzsimmons as coach.

This has led Chandler to call both Fitzsimmons and Durocher before him for a hearing to be held just before the annual major league meetings in Chicago next month.

The commissioner wants to know if the Giants signed Fitz while he was still on the reserve list of the Boston Braves.

If so, the signing was clearly a violation of baseball law and Chandler has been quick to punish any infraction of those laws. Witness his recent action in making nine members of the Detroit farm chain free agents.

THE GIANTS recently announced they had signed Frank Frisch and Fitzsimmons as coaches for next year.

The commissioner has no bone to pick with the signing of Frisch. Frisch's contract as a baseball broadcaster had expired and he was free to sign with anybody.

Durocher wanted him as a third base coach to succeed Travis Jackson, and as an instructor of his wobbly infielders. Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, promptly obliged.

Leo also was eager to land Fitz as first base coach, general morale builder and instructor of pitchers.

So far so good. Nobody can blame Durocher for seeking both men. Fitz is and always was in his pitching days, a born fighter. He can and does add fighting spirit to a club. He is a master at teaching young pitchers.

There is a possibility that Chandler might overlook the signing of Fitzsimmons even if the fat man was on the Braves' reserve list when signed, provided the Braves make no objection.

It may be that Billy Southworth, manager of the Braves, is willing to relinquish all claims to Fitzsimmons.

But if Billy wants to hold him, and Chandler rules he was on the reserve list when signed by the Giants, then both Durocher and the Giants are in for a rough session.

In that event, the least they could expect from Chandler would be to have him cancel the deal and send Fitz back to the Braves.

Chandler suspended Durocher for the entire season of 1947 because of the famous rhubarb between Larry MacPhail of the Yanks and Branch Rickey of the Dodgers.

It is well known that Chandler is not one of Durocher's greatest admirers and therefore Durocher is not likely to get any special consideration at the hands of the commissioner.

Big Pickaway Notches 16th

Big Pickaway, champions of the county basketball league, Friday night racked up its 16th straight victory against loop opposition as it trimmed Darby, 59-27.

Coach Robert Seward's charges won all their 10 games in league play last year, added three more in grabbing the county tournament and notched little Darby this week as its third victim of the 1948-49 season.

Big gun of the Pickaway attack was Ned Wolfe who sent 20 points through the nets.

But the Pickaway aggregation did not fare as well in its reserve and eighth grade battles. Darby tromped all over the Pickaway juniors, 45-16, while the Darby graders edged the Pickaway junior high, 21-18.

Washington C. H., Bexley In Tie

Washington C. H. and Columbus Bexley battled to a scoreless tie on a slippery Fayette County field Friday night.

The Blue Lions, whom Circleville tipped from the undefeated ranks a week ago, muffed his lone opportunity to score. It came in the fading minutes of the first half when a downfield drive bogged down on Bexley's three-yard-line.

Bexley failed to score on two near-payoff drives, both ending on the Blue Lion four.

Only one forward pass was completed the entire game. Four aerial thrusts were intercepted.

English Horses Arrive For Test

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — Two English-bred three-year-olds from the Aga Khan's racing stables arrived in New York by plane from London presumably to race against America's champion, Citation.

Nathoo, 1948 Irish Derby winner, and Noor completed the North Atlantic flight last night.

Racing observers believe that Nathoo and Noor will be entered against Citation in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap Feb. 26.

Even Junior Colleges Eye Bowl Games

Fever May Drift To Kindergartens

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Delirium in pursuit of an invitation to a post-season bowl football game will reach its height today in Union City, N. J.

Except for a few schools which do not prolong their seasons into bowl competition, it is a common practice to court these bids as an added source of revenue.

Generally, however, a school quietly and coyly goes about the business of trying to latch on to some of those money bags in the post-season bowls.

That's not the way Bergen Junior College, of Teaneck, N. J., is going about it. The Bergen juniors are making an organized onslaught against the portals of the Junior Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Cal.

The Bergen juniors have won eight straight and meet Lincoln College of Pennsylvania in their finale in Union City, with a bid for Bergen to the junior bowl presumably hanging on the outcome.

ALL ROOTERS are stirred up over the game, but none more than C. L. Little, president of the college.

This is a case of do or die, kids, for dear old Bergen, with that trip a-waiting to sunny California.

A press release on the big game says in part:

"The importance of the game can best be measured by the fact that Bergen's No. 1 rooter, College President C. L. Little, has arranged a direct wire to officials in Pasadena considering schools for the third annual Junior Rose Bowl.

Little will flash the score of the Bergen-Lincoln game as soon as the final gun has sounded to end the 1948 grid season for both colleges."

Now that junior colleges have joined in the madness there is no reason why it shouldnt be picked up by high schools and worked on down into the grammar schools and finally into the kindergartens.

And as long as this thing is going the way it is, pay these kids from kindergarten right on. It would open up a brand new career for athletically inclined youngsters.

Saltcreek Falls Before Jackson

Saltcreek, looking for its first win in Pickaway County Basketball League play Friday night, went to the wrong place.

It was the guest of Jackson and the host team showed little mercy in tripping their visitors, 39-30.

Holding a good edge throughout the contest, Jackson grabbed off the victory to balance its loop budget at one win against one loss.

Wayne Rhoads for Jackson and Dave Luckhart for Saltcreek dominated the scoring column with 11 points each.

DETROIT, Nov. 19—Joe Louis was still the champion with the hometown folks today after his first Detroit ring appearance in two years.

Although sluggish and paunchy, the heavyweight champion had no trouble polishing off Verne Mitchell, his 195-pound opponent in a six-round exhibition last night.

The Brown Bomber dropped Mitchell twice for a two-count in the second round and a nine-count in the third.

Ashville Cagers Set To Defend Mid-Ohio Crown

Ashville Pettibones basketball team will begin defense of its Mid-Ohio League crown next Friday in Ashville against Powell.

The Ashvillers last year copped 28 games in 29 starts, easily waltzing away with the league championship and establishing itself as one of the outstanding central Ohio semi-pro cage quintets.

Practically the whole 1947 championship aggregation will be seen on the hardwood in the Friday tilt, with Charles Pettibone and Jay Gregg at forwards, Russ Gregg at center, and Don Thomas and "Red" Wilson at Guard.

Russ Gregg led the team in scoring during last season, netting an average of 19 points per tilt. Second in scoring honors for the Ashville squad was Pettibone, who potted 14 points per evening from his forward post.

REPLACEMENTS for this year's squad include Deke Eberle, Ashville high school cage mentor, touted as a sensational backboard man for both recovery and tip-ins. Other replacements probably will be Dick Messick and Dick Pettibone.

The Mid-Ohio loop holds six teams. In addition to Ashville and its Friday night opponent, league members are Dublin, Reynoldsburg, Grandview and Groveport. Circleville will not be represented in the league.

Circleville American Legion basketball team is expected to play preliminary contests to the Ashville Pettibone's home encounters. Gametime will be around 7 p. m.

4 Wolverines Dominate INS All Big 9

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—Four sterling performers from Michigan—End Dick Rifenburg, Tackle Al Wistert, Guard Dominic Tomasi and Back Pete Elliott—won starting places today on International News Service's All-Western Conference football team for 1948.

The team boasts not four but five backs, a situation considered the only fair solution to the dilemma which faced INS experts throughout Big Nine territory.

Besides Elliott, Northwestern's Art Murakowski, Indiana's George Taliaferro, Ohio State's Joe Whisler and Purdue's Harry Szulborski all were rated outstandingly worthy of first-team recognition.

For that matter, three tackles—Wistert, Phil O'Reilly of Purdue, and Leo Nomellini of Minnesota—won such sound acclaim throughout the conference that here, too, it would have been wrong to leave any one of them off the mythical starting team. Therefore, Nomellini, an all-conference guard last season, was placed at guard again this year.

No such problems confronted the selectors at end, where Rifenburg and Bud Grant, the exeptional Minnesota flanker, stood out; or at center, where Northwestern's famous Alex Sarkisian was the greatest in a year of great centers.

75,000 Brave Rains To Greet Immortal Harley

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20—Chic Harley, Ohio State university's great football immortal, was in Columbus today for the classic battle of the season, Michigan and Ohio State.

In one of the greatest tributes ever paid to a local figure of sports, 75,000 people lined the curbs in downtown Columbus and welcomed Harley amidst a driving downpour.

From union station to the state house the streets were jammed with friends and fans alike as Harley was driven slowly from Union Terminal to the state house.

He made the trip in an open car. With him were his brother, Bill, Mayor James A. Rhodes of Columbus and Gov. Thomas J. Herbert.

Harley has been living in Chicago since his release recently, from a veterans hospital in Danville, Ill.

Felpi Fails Before Bettina

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Boxing fans agreed today that Enrique Felpi, Argentine white hope, needs more experience to become a leading heavyweight threat.

Felpi lost a unanimous decision to Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., former light heavyweight champion, in a 10-round bout in St. Nicholas Arena last night. Felpi was wild and telegraphed his punches.

Redskins Hoping For Eagle Win

Browns Favored Over Yankees

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Washington's game with Philadelphia tomorrow provides the Redskins with their last chance to stay in the running for the National Football League's eastern title.

Philadelphia is in first place. Washington in second. Sammy Baugh will be in there pitching for the 'Skins, but Coach Greasy Neale says his Eagles are the best team he ever coached.

Chicago's Bears and Cardinals, tied for the lead in the western division, are strong favorites to keep on winning. The Bears expect to romp at the expense of the Boston Yanks. The Cardinals should pile up enough of an early lead to withstand the usual late rally of the Los Angeles Rams.

Chuck Conerly of the victory-starved New York Giants will attempt to pass his team to a win over the Green Bay Packers. However, the brilliant freshman will need more defensive help from his mates than he has been getting in order to turn the trick.

Pittsburgh is a one-touchdown favorite over the Detroit Lions.

IN THE RIVAL All-America Conference, the New York Yankees again will try to register their first win over the Champion Cleveland Browns. Last year, the Yankees did manage to hold the Browns to a 28-28 tie in a wild game.

Spec Sanders, former backfield star of the Yankees who has been warming the bench, will be used extensively along with the team's new ace, Pistol Pete Layden, in an attempt to stop Otto Graham, Marion Morley, Mac Speedie, Dante Lavelli and Co.

Baltimore is a one-touch-down favorite over Los Angeles, with many observers looking for the Dons to turn in an upset.

San Francisco is a topheavy choice over Brooklyn, and Buffalo almost as much so over the Chicago Rockets.

Ashville Tops Liberty Union

Ashville Broncos posted a 47-35 win over Liberty Union cagers on the Ashville floor Friday night.

SAN BRUNO, Cal., Nov. 20—Shannon II headed a field of 12 handicap stars nominated today for the $25,000 added San Francisco handicap at a mile and an eighth to be run at Tanforan Thanksgiving Day.

The Australian champion, owned by Neil S. McCarthy of Los Angeles, will be coupled with On Trust, owned by E. O. Stice and Sons. Both are trained by Willie Molter, one of the nation's leading trainers.

Shannon II is co-holder of the world's record of 1:47 3-5 for the distance. He worked out a mile in 1:39 2-5 in preparation for the race after losing to Please Me and Tropical Sea in a $10,000 mile and a sixteenth handicap in his first outing at Tanforan.

Even Junior Colleges Eye Bowl Games

Fever May Drift To Kindergartens

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Delirium in pursuit of an invitation to a post-season bowl football game will reach its height today in Union City, N. J.

Except for a few schools which do not prolong their seasons into bowl competition, it is a common practice to court these bids as an added source of revenue.

Generally, however, a school quietly and coyly goes about the business of trying to latch on to some of those money bags in the post-season bowls.

That's not the way Bergen Junior College, of Teaneck, N. J., is going about it. The Bergen juniors are making an organized onslaught against the portals of the Junior Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Cal.

The Bergen juniors have won eight straight and meet Lincoln College of Pennsylvania in their finale in Union City, with a bid for Bergen to the junior bowl presumably hanging on the outcome.

ALL ROOTERS are stirred up over the game, but none more than C. L. Little, president of the college.

This is a case of do or die, kids, for dear old Bergen, with that trip a-waiting to sunny California.

A press release on the big game says in part:

"The importance of the game can best be measured by the fact that Bergen's No. 1 rooter, College President C. L. Little, has arranged a direct wire to officials in Pasadena considering schools for the third annual Junior Rose Bowl.

Little will flash the score of the Bergen-Lincoln game as soon as the final gun has sounded to end the 1948 grid season for both colleges."

Now that junior colleges have joined in the madness there is no reason why it shouldnt be picked up by high schools and worked on down into the grammar schools and finally into the kindergartens.

And as long as this thing is going the way it is, pay these kids from kindergarten right on. It would open up a brand new career for athletically inclined youngsters.

It was the guest of Jackson and the host team showed little mercy in tripping their visitors, 39-30.

Holding a good edge throughout the contest, Jackson grabbed off the victory to balance its loop budget at one win against one loss.

13-Year-Old Crime Career Started Here Finally Ends

Michigan Man's Card Put In File

Case Like Capone's In One Respect

A 13-year-old police record, which began in Circleville Oct. 21, 1935, was placed in the inactive file Saturday by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

On that October day, the sheriff arrested a man who gave his name as Wally Holmgram, 21, of Cadillac, Mich., for attempted rape of a minor girl.

Later, however, he was released from the Pickaway County jail when the grand jury failed to return an indictment against this man who called himself Holmgram. He had said he was a showman.

Freed of the case against him, Holmgram, alias Walter Holmes, Walter Ernest Holmgreen and Bob Murphy, skipped across five states and was arrested in each state and by the War Department.

IN THE SUCCEEDING 13 years, or until Nov. 2, 1948, police in Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Nebraska and Wyoming compiled a record of 26 arrests against him.

Ann Arbor, Mich., authorities arrested Holmgram for larceny in a building. Princeton, Ill., held him for vagrancy, Jackson, Mich., police picked him up as a fugitive.

At Chappell, Nebr., Holmgram was apprehended for auto larceny, in Cheyenne, Wyo., he was held again for vagrancy.

THE RECORD built up against Holmgram made him an unwanted man. In Saginaw, Mich., he was arrested for intoxication and the court gave him 30 minutes to leave town.

In Cheyenne, Holmgram was given the choice of serving 10 days in jail or catching the next freight train out of town. Doubtless he chose the latter.

During Holmgram's crime career, he appeared in many courts and slept many nights in city and county jails. He served time or paid himself free according to the condition of his wallet.

By this time, of course, Holmgram, had tangled with FBI agents in violation of the Dyer Act or auto theft and had added the J. Edgar Hoover No. 1,743,549 to his record.

But like even some of the most notorious crime careers, Holmgram's fast life caught up with him in Chicago. He hadn't made the same name as Dillinger or Capone.

The only similarity is that all three bear the same finality on police and FBI records—DECEASED.

Chicago police record an "Unknown Deceased. Supposed To Be Robert Johnson." Died 11-2-48." It probably was Holmgram, they say.

John Bales Gets New Post

John Foster Bales, executive vice-president of Tek-Hughes Corp. of New York, has resigned his post effective Jan. 1 to accept a vice-presidency with Yardley of London.

AFL-CIO Split May Develop Trouble In Labor Law Change

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—The AFL-CIO split in the labor movement appears likely to make more difficult the administration's job of drafting a substitute for the Taft-Hartley law.

The AFL and the CIO worked together closely during the campaign and they are united in their demands for repeal of the existing labor statute and a return to the Wagner Act.

However, Secretary of Labor Tobin and other administration experts may receive conflicting recommendations when they consult the two big labor bodies for suggestions on a new labor law.

Sen. McGrath, (D) R. I., Democratic national chairman, touched on one of the chief problems when he pledged repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act but called for some protection against national emergency strikes.

Both McGrath and Tobin have indicated their opposition to the injunctive process contained in the present law. President Truman used this weapon against coal and rail strikes in last year.

Some administration sources favor a method similar to that contained in the Railway Labor Act—a 60-day cooling off period while a federal board makes recommendations for settlement of a dispute.

There have been signs from the AFL convention in Cincinnati that the federation is not vitally interested in this issue. The CIO's big, industrial unions probably will bear the brunt of any machinery erected against national emergency strikes, along with the miners.

Again, on the issue of non-Communist affidavits, the AFL has less interest than the CIO. McGrath said he is opposed to the principle and said labor should not be "singled out" for such treatment.

Labor generally agrees with McGrath, including such noted anti-Communists as CIO President Philip Murray and Mine Boss John L. Lewis, who have refused to sign the affidavits.

However, the issue is much more important to the CIO which has 11 leftwing unions, including the United Electrical Workers.

Pickaway Scout Combine Seeks Operating Fund

Pickaway District Boy Scouts Saturday issued an appeal to Pickaway Countians for contributions with which to keep the Boy Scout ball rolling.

Spring solicitations for $3,000 for the Scouts netted the program but $2,500, leaving a $500 deficit in proposed plans.

Bulk of the funds is to be used to pay the salary of Ray Turner, recently appointed district field executive. Turner's job here is to train the 60 Scouters in the area so that the best methods of handling the county's 229 Boy Scouts.

Remainder of the solicited funds is to be used in various programs for the seven Scout troops, two senior units and two Cub Packs now operating.

Contributions may be sent to James Smith, Esmeralda Canning Co.

Candidate Seeks To Cancel Votes In Housing Unit

XENIA, Nov. 20 — Incumbent Greene County Commissioner Ralph O. Spahr of Xenia, had a suit on file today claiming he was elected Nov. 2 to another term because votes from one precinct should not be counted.

Spahr, defeated for reelection in early counts, charged in a suit against his two Democratic opponents, that residents of Skyway Park could not vote because they live in a federal housing area.

Through his attorney, E. G. Schuessler of the attorney general's office, Spahr claimed that if the heavy Democratic Skyway Park vote were eliminated because voters there were under federal control, he would be elected.

He named Osborn's Mayor Robert E. Crone and Thurman Tidd of New Jasper as defendants.

Spahr's suit contradicts an opinion by Republican Prosecutor Marcus Shoup, who ruled last April the transfer of the Skyway housing units to the Army for government employes did not affect the residents' voting status.

New Yorker Planning DP Ruling To Eliminate Discrimination

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—Rep. Celler, (D) N. Y., has revealed plans for major revision of the displaced persons law when he assumes chairmanship of the House judiciary committee Jan. 3.

Celler favors five important amendments to the DP law which would bring it more in line with the recommendations of President Truman.

Mr. Truman made an issue of the Republican-enacted law in this campaign for election. He declared that it discriminated against Jews and Catholics. Under the law, 205,000 European refugees are being admitted to the United States during the next two years. The first contingents now are arriving from Germany.

Celler proposed the following changes in the law:

1. The "cut-off" date would be advanced from December 1945 to April 1947. The present law makes ineligible for admission refugees who entered the American-British zones of Germany after the earlier date.

* * *

2. DPs WOULD be admitted without regard to immigration quotas. The 80th Congress provdided that 50 percent of those admitted should be deducted from the regular quotas.

3. Preference given the Volksdeutsche, refugees of German descent, would be eliminated entirely.

4. DPs would be admitted according to a "suitable distribution formula."

It was anticipated that Celler would also recommend an increase in the number admitted to 400,000, as urged by the administration.

$1,000 Reward Out For Slayer

CLEVELAND, Nov. 20 — A $1,000 reward has been offered for the arrest and conviction of the attack-slayer of Mrs. Helen Takacy, 62, Tuesday night in suburban Shaker Heights.

The reward was posted last night by Dr. Theodore Takacy, 36, of Slater, S. C., the dead woman's son.

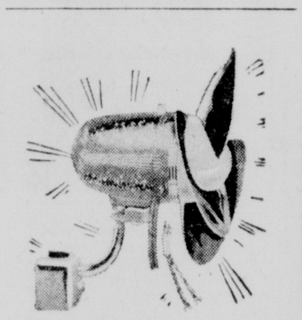

Police said they hoped the reward money would result in a tip which might break the case. So far, authorities are without a clew to the killer's identity.

They still are searching, however, for a tall, thin, shabbily-dressed man seen near the scene of the crime just before Mrs. Takacy's body was discovered.

13-Year-Old Crime Career Started Here Finally Ends

Michigan Man's Card Put In File

Case Like Capone's In One Respect

A 13-year-old police record, which began in Circleville Oct. 21, 1935, was placed in the inactive file Saturday by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

On that October day, the sheriff arrested a man who gave his name as Wally Holmgram, 21, of Cadillac, Mich., for attempted rape of a minor girl.

Later, however, he was released from the Pickaway County jail when the grand jury failed to return an indictment against this man who called himself Holmgram. He had said he was a showman.

Freed of the case against him, Holmgram, alias Walter Holmes, Walter Ernest Holmgreen and Bob Murphy, skipped across five states and was arrested in each state and by the War Department.

IN THE SUCCEEDING 13 years, or until Nov. 2, 1948, police in Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Nebraska and Wyoming compiled a record of 26 arrests against him.

Ann Arbor, Mich., authorities arrested Holmgram for larceny in a building. Princeton, Ill., held him for vagrancy, Jackson, Mich., police picked him up as a fugitive.

At Chappell, Nebr., Holmgram was apprehended for auto larceny, in Cheyenne, Wyo., he was held again for vagrancy.

THE RECORD built up against Holmgram made him an unwanted man. In Saginaw, Mich., he was arrested for intoxication and the court gave him 30 minutes to leave town.

In Cheyenne, Holmgram was given the choice of serving 10 days in jail or catching the next freight train out of town. Doubtless he chose the latter.

During Holmgram's crime career, he appeared in many courts and slept many nights in city and county jails. He served time or paid himself free according to the condition of his wallet.

By this time, of course, Holmgram, had tangled with FBI agents in violation of the Dyer Act or auto theft and had added the J. Edgar Hoover No. 1,743,549 to his record.

But like even some of the most notorious crime careers, Holmgram's fast life caught up with him in Chicago. He hadn't made the same name as Dillinger or Capone.

The only similarity is that all three bear the same finality on police and FBI records—DECEASED.

Chicago police record an "Unknown Deceased. Supposed To Be Robert Johnson." Died 11-2-48." It probably was Holmgram, they say.
